Career

Before joining the Holy AG team, Michael Henseling spent nine years working in finance and tax, including at Dresdner Bank and at PwC, where he was a tax consultant.

In the year 2000, he took lead of the commercial department of Holy GmbH & Co. KG. With the restructuring of the company into HOLY AG in 2003, he was called upon to serve as chief financial officer.

My vision for Outletcity Metzingen

"Since the year 2000, I have been helping to transform Outletcity Metzingen from a standard factory outlet into Europe's leading shopping destination. What used to be a real estate management company has gradually become an enterprise focusing on retail, technology and digital solutions. The number of employees has also kept pace with this evolution. HOLY AG started out with 15 members of staff and now has more than 300 qualified employees (and counting).

A company can only expand on this scale if all its departments are very much on the same page and work together effectively. There needs to be a specific focus on the IT infrastructure, as well as on the Finance and Legal departments, which shape their respective general conditions.

My vision for the future is, with solid financial support, to push forward with our work to transform Outletcity into a shopping destination that people flock to from all over the world for an unforgettable experience while ensuring sustainable growth in the long term."
